urchin softlight

Designed by Stephanie Forsythe and Todd MacAllen, urchin softlight has an animate character that invites playful interaction. Utilizing a flexible honeycomb geometry, urchin expands and morphs into a multitude of forms as you rotate it through and around its own center with your hands. urchin can even be turned inside out to create straight walled cylinders and conical forms. Adjusting the form of urchin also adjusts the intensity, direction, and quality of light - a beautiful, tactile way to sculpt light in a space.

urchin softlight is available in three sizes and belongs to molo's innovative, award winning 'soft collection' of expandable, compressible, and flexible furniture and space partitions made entirely from paper or textiles.

The shade of urchin softlight is made from a paper-like, translucent white, polyethylene non-woven textile and provides ambient diffusion for the energy-efficient LED light source inside - available in either daylight white (4200K) or warm white (2500K), international 110 - 240 voltage and 3 sizes.

A custom dimmer comes with urchin softlight. The minimal design features single button functionality - clicking the button toggles the light on and off, holding the button down smoothly cycles the intensity of light from maximum to minimum and back.
